

color of externally-applied light is most therapeutic for an affected chakra. After years of testing hundreds of patients, some interesting observations are apparent. The most striking is that the vast majority of American patients show imbalances in the Solar Plexus chakra, and that corrective treatment of this center has a markedly positive effect on many of their complaints. This is particularly true when chakra treatment is combined with acupuncture.

Many of the patients with imbalanced Solar Plexus energies also have a slight greenish hue emanating from parts of their faces. This is a diagnostic indicator of Liver imbalance in Five-Element acupuncture teachings.

Let's take a look at the functions and symptoms of the Solar Plexus chakra.

The Solar Plexus chakra influences or "rules" the the digestive organs, the muscular systems in general, the liver and gallbladder. It also has a general governing effect on the limbs, particularly the elbow and knee joints. On a consciousness level, it expresses personal Will, ego, sense of self and effectiveness at relating to or influencing other people and animals. A good CEO, military officer or dog trainer, for examples, must have a strong and well-developed Solar Plexus center. When this center is blocked by various internalized fears, self-doubt and limiting beliefs, people have difficulty getting what they want in life or feeling deep emotions, and are easily subject to anxiety, panic attacks, obsessive-compulsive disorders, worry and paranoia.

Physical diseases associated with the Solar Plexus center include stomach ulcers, intestinal tumors, diabetes, pancreatitis, indigestion, anorexia/bulimia, hepatitis, cirrhosis, adrenal imbalances, colon diseases, arthroscopy (stiffness of the joints) and many forms of SMI (severe mental illness). It is also my observation that people with addictive personalities, insomnia and some forms of depression tend to have overactive or blocked Solar Plexus centers. Do you recognize many of your patients in this list?

Many people who do not have overt diseases listed above tend to have low grade feelings of unhappiness, fatigue or vague complaints that arise from an inner stalemate between their efforts to heal or uplift themselves and the underlying imbalances of the chakra. This includes many idealistic people who practice holistic health or spirituality.

Now let's take a look at some of the symptoms listed in classic texts of acupuncture for the Yin Wei extraordinary vessel :

Congeaed, stagnant qi, easily loses control, too much thinking, sad, pain in the heart and abdomen

Forgetfulness, mental unclarity

Deficiency in the heart, paranoid, shen and thinking are anxious

The Nan Jing states this relationship for the yin and yang wei vessels: "Yin and Yang cannot balance; the (visible) emotions will be thinking too much, obsession, loss of will and lack of self-control".

Many of the physical symptoms listed for the Yin Wei, such as "fullness and discomfort in the middle warmer, stagnation or lumps that will not disperse in the intestines, increasing congestion of food, arms are red and swollen" also parallel the diseases and symptoms associated with the Solar Plexus chakra.

---

<sup>1</sup> From the Zhen Jiu Da Cheng, as quoted in book Extraordinary Vessels by Matsumoto and Birch, Paradigm Publications 1986

<sup>2</sup> ibid

There are certainly some strong parallels between the symptoms and functioning of the Solar Plexus and Yin Wei vessel. Both relate to disorders of deep emotions somatizing themselves in the abdominal organs and musculature, and holographically affecting the limbs and skin.

I have treated large numbers of patients using a combination of acupuncture on the Chong Mai/Yin Wei vessels and color light therapy through the Solar Plexus. I did not arrive at these treatments due to examination of the information described in the books listed here. I did because these treatments were indicated through regular intake and diagnosis. It was only after years of seeing this treatment combination come up over and over again that I put this observation together of the synergy and great value of this combination treatment.

The 8 Extraordinary Vessels are usually treated through their Confluent Points: Lu 7 + Kid 6 (Ren/Yin Qiao), TW 5 + GB 41 (Dai/Yangwei), Pc 6 + Sp 4 (Chong/Yinwei) and SI 3 + UB 62 (Du/Yang Qiao). Treatment of these point combinations, often in conjunction with other related points, is appropriate if the patient is exhibiting the symptoms associated with dysfunction of the Vessel, and meridian/Organ diagnosis supports this conclusion. For example symptoms of Chong/Yinwei include:

Heart problems and chest pain with anxiety, palpitations, shortness of breath, neurosis, intercostal neuralgia, herpes zoster and post-herpetic neuralgia, stomach disorders, gynecological problems, cold feet, liver and gallbladder disorders, anus disease, strained back with digestive or GYN problems, some kinds of knee pain, sciatica that shoots down to the big toe or down the inside of the leg (splæen channel), stomach or duodenal ulcer, many kinds of depressive/anxiety complexes.

If a patient is complaining of any of these symptoms, and meridian diagnosis reveals imbalances of various combinations of Spleen, Kidney, Pericardium, and Liver, then it is usually appropriate to treat Pc 6 and Sp 4. I often substitute Liver 3 for Sp 4 if there are marked Liver symptoms, and use Sp 4 if the digestive symptoms are more apparent.

If, in addition to these diagnostic findings the Solar Plexus chakra is found to be blocked, or dysfunctional it will usually improve the treatment outcome if it is treated in conjunction with acupuncture. Here is a useful procedure for treating the Solar Plexus:

1) If the chakra is found to be imbalanced through dowsing or direct sensing with the hands, ask the patient to touch the center of the chakra with her index finger. Use her other hand for O-Ring kinesiology testing. The muscle test will go “weak” when the chakra is touching an imbalanced or blocked chakra. Ask the patient to continue holding the test point, successively place color filter slides next to the point and re-test the indicator muscle each time. When you find a color that makes the muscle test very strong (while the patient is continuing to touch the weak test point), then that is the color the chakra requires for rebalancing – thus satisfying the “color hunger” of that aspect of the body-mind.

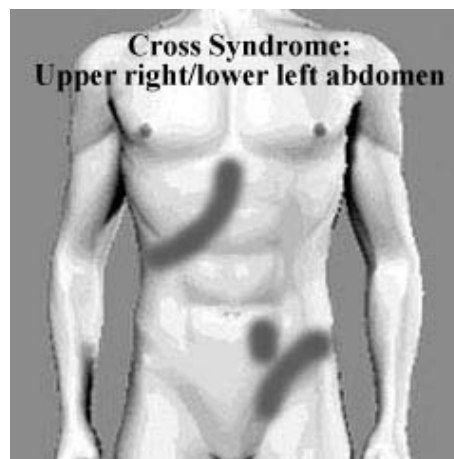

2) Apply acupuncture needles to the indicated confluent points, to be left in place during the chakra treatment. With patients for which needles are inappropriate, the points may be treated with polarized microcurrent probe stimulation.

---

<sup>3</sup> From book Microcurrent Electro-Acupuncture by Darren Starwynn. Desert Heart Press, 2002

According to Manaka, most patients being treated for Chong/Yin Wei require – on Pc 6 and + on Sp 4, treated on the right side of the body only. In about 25% of cases these polarities may need to be reversed. O Ring kinesiology can be used to confirm the correct choice of polarity – simply treat the points with a polarity placement for one second and then test the muscle, then reverse the polarity, treat another second and re-test. The placement that triggers a rock-solid O Ring is the one to use.

If the patient exhibits the “Cross Syndrome”, in which there are painful, weak or tense abdominal symptoms in the upper right and lower left abdominal quadrants, then TW 5 and GB 41 can be added to the treatment on the left side of the body only. TW 5 will usually require – and GB 41 +, again, test and reverse if necessary.

2) Using a microcurrent and color light probe device<sup>4</sup> and set it to polarized probes @ about 75 microamps. Place the + probe on the front chakra point and the – probe on the back, over the spine behind the chakra. Treat for about 30 - 60 seconds with the color of light and polarized microcurrent stimulation. It is very helpful to ask the patient to speak a healing statement during the probe stimulation that helps reset negative beliefs held in her subconscious mind.

3) After this treatment, recheck the patient’s diagnostic indicators – muscle test of the chakra point as well as rechecking TCM pulse or abdominal diagnosis. If treatment was well-selected all will improve, in most cases dramatically.

I have found that 1 – 3 treatment of this type have produced wonderful improvements for many patients with complaints of various combinations of pain, internal disease and stress-related emotional imbalances. This has provided a deeper-acting and more comprehensive benefit for the patient.

Darren Starwynn offers educational, hands-on, seminars throughout the USA through East-West Seminars.. For a schedule of upcoming events, see www.east-westseminars.com. Darren may be reached at: dstarwynn@neta.com.

---

<sup>4</sup> I have designed such a device, information on it may be found by writing to the author

<sup>5</sup> For details on this procedure called PNE Balancing, please see my article in the Acupuncture Today archives at <http://www.acupuncturetoday.com/mpacms/at/article.php?id=29058>